Brother McBride should be on the Entertainment Committee. As an entertainer his fame has gained a place in two cities.

Hello! poor Pinkham's voice is heard from the tomb again in an editorial utterance! Go it, Lazarus!—Advertiser.

"Even in death these men their victim dread,"—Pontius Pilate.

Mrs. Watkins' proposal to interest the Easterners in orphanages where the children can grow up with the country is an excellent idea. Hawaii is the one place of the whole earth for such an institution.

Just as the sugar optimists were beginning to think there might be a hole in the doughnut after all, the London and the centrifugal market kindly give signs of strength. Don't get discouraged. This would be a good season if the price should drop as low as four cents.

Another demonstration of the value of the morning paper "word" was furnished in the Crook divorce kind friends called on the evening newspapers and asked that only passing mention be made of the Crook divorce case out of consideration for the extreme nervous condition of one of the parties to the suit. Assurance was given that the morning paper would do the same. "His word" was given. The result was first page and a photograph. "My word!"

The further restriction of Japanese emigrants coming to this port will likely cause a passing flurry. Hawaii has a way of looking on the dark side of any movement that has to do with the restriction of laboring people. We feel certain, however, that no serious shortage in the labor market will be experienced. It is becoming more and more evident that the Japanese who have lived in the islands for a term of years regard the place as their home. The tendency is for them to return from Japan and more permanently establish themselves here. We believe there is enough of such people to do the work of the islands for some years to come. As the months go by, the progress toward the European supply will be more marked, with the result that conditions will not be seriously upset though the racial situation will quietly become much better balanced.

REPUBLICANS SHOULD ACT.

To just what extent the political views of Senator Hewitt of Kau are tempered by his opinions on the land question, we will not attempt to say, but there is no doubt that the Republican party of the Territory of Hawaii needs to look well to its laurels.

The danger to the party at the present time is its extreme lethargy when the opposition is so active. Democrats, for instance, are constantly at work getting their men in shape and learning on whom they can depend.

Republicans are doing nothing. Democrats may not have more than a baker's dozen for a following, but that baker's dozen, well organized and constantly on the watch, is a more effective force than thirteen hundred members of the party in power unorganized and unable to state just where they stand.

The Republican party should be sending its runners out and making its preliminary canvass at the present time. It should by all means be in a position to meet the opposition at every point and know what former Republicans are openly or secretly in the ranks of the opposition.

To this suggestion, the police organ of the Democracy will of course make the objection that the political workers are beginning to look early for the leaves and fishes. To postpone as long as possible any activity on the part of the Republicans is a part of the Democratic game.

The preliminary canvass is all-important at this time for the further reason that the Republican party should be thoroughly informed on the politics and the location of the voters previous to the primaries. If this is not done, it will be possible to run anything and everything into the Republican primaries. It is more than probable that Democrats and the "floating vote" may turn the primaries of the Republican party so as to prevent the nomination of the superior men willing to become candidates. There is no good reason why men who are on the Democratic rolls, or in the ranks of the various "parties of peace" that are being organized, should vote at the Republican primaries. It is a foregone conclusion that they will not stay with the party. They vote in the primary only to help a friend through in his hour of need.

If it be true, as Senator Hewitt says, that the Hawaiian-Americans are very much dissatisfied with the fifteen-year lease law which the Delegate put through Congress, it is none too early for the campaign of education to begin. The hour is even late. Senator Hewitt is not the only one who reports opposition to this new law. The Democrats are aggressive and watching for every point of vantage.

As for the Achi party and the Home Rule party and various other "independent" organizations, they are dangerous only by their constant agitation and misrepresentation. They do not control a large vote but they keep alive the campaign lies, and in that way help the cause of Republican opponents.

The ordinary way of conducting the campaign has been for the Republicans to wait until the last moment and then exert all their effort in lambasting the wayward ones into line. This has been fairly successful but it will be used once too often.

The result of this type of last-minute campaigning is to bring into use the least reputable features of political manipulation, for a ticket that has weak points on account of the party allowing its primaries to be swayed by the floating vote.

Either the County committee of each election district or some subcommittee of the Territorial organization should begin the individual canvass of the voters immediately. True, a later canvass would have to be made previous to the election, but it is a very valuable thing in politics to know what men can be depended upon from the first to the last.

Hewitt is right in that something should be done by the Republicans. He is also correct in his assertion that the land policy will be a strong factor in the campaign. And the Republican party, by reason of its being the party of the Administration, will be subject to a general attack by every disappointed land-seeker. We do not believe Republicans should supinely view increasing opposition to the Delegate and his work in Congress.

FREAR APPROVES HULA

something that will be so unique they will remember it always," was practically the Mayor's endorsement, and he approved a cablegram to that effect sent by McBride to the Honolulu committee. Phelan went even further by dictating the following cable himself:
"Acting Governor Ernest Mott-Smith:

"As requested, I suggest characteristic Hawaiian entertainment, sailors' athletic games and other important changes, and that McBride arrange general plan proposed now, our committee helping.

"JAMES D. PHELAN."

The hula dance, which is a characteristic island form of entertainment, is performed by native women in rather undress costume. McBride's plan, which has been endorsed by Governor Frear, is that this dance be given publicly under the auspices of the committee, with certain regulations governing dress, etc. Otherwise, he says, the sailors will contrive to see it anyway, and not always under the best circumstances. The luau feasts, which some of the Hawaiian committee also want taboed, is a favorite native form of banqueting. Those who attend it sit cross-legged around a big circle, and are served island dishes, the most famous of which are poi, a form of vegetable paste, and roast pig cooked in the ground. All these things, it is believed, would make a tremendous hit with the seamen.

McBride is also securing the opinions of the sailors themselves. With-out exception, they have declared enthusiastically for the hula and the luau. The opposition to this form of entertainment in Hawaii is said to have come from certain of the missionaries, while others are just as emphatically in their favor.

The above paragraph seems to sum up the lofty ideas that have come from that energetic young McBride. He has kindly taken the whole burden of entertaining the fleet on his sturdy shoulders,—that is, he did, until the Executive Committee became fearful for his health, and removed any superfluous authority from him. Now he undertakes the no small task of telling where in the people of Honolulu disapprove of hula dancing, and the Governor of the Territory approves.

Acting Governor Mott-Smith received a long letter from McBride this morning. It came from the Coast to Milo on the Enterprise, and was brought over on the Mauna Kea this morning.

Mr. Mott-Smith says that McBride acknowledges the receipt of the cables from him to the effect that plans for

It does not take much of a guesser to figure out that McBride had "plenty" to say which was not for publication.

CORNWELL MONUMENT

A monument for the late Wm. H. Cornwell has just been completed by the Hawaiian Iron Fence and Monument Works. The die and the plinth are of highly polished dark granite, and rests on a massive Hawaiian stone base. The letters are raised in panels, and it is altogether an exceptionally fine piece of work.

Mrs. Marion Crook was yesterday granted a divorce from her husband, Lawrence R. Crook. Although it was not contested, the case was one of the most sensational that has come before the divorce courts in many a long day, having for principals, as it has, leading and well-known local people.

Mrs. Crook brought suit for the divorce, which was granted within a few minutes after the application was filed. She was put on the stand and testified that her husband had accused her to her face as well as to outside parties of having improper relations with other men. She also said that he had threatened to kill himself on various occasions and on June last he did make an attempt to do away with himself. This was the time that she so emphatically denied that there was any trouble between them.

In his answer to the libel, Lawrence Crook admits that he was married to the libellant, but denies absolutely every other statement that his wife made. Mrs. Crook was given custody of the child.

ORPHAN HOME FOR HAWAII

Editor Evening Bulletin:—One is constantly hearing the labor question discussed, and always as a hopeless one. Permit me to advance this idea, as a solution of the future discussions, say in the next five or ten years, and from that on, always settled.

As we are well aware, there are thousands of children being cared for in the United States at public expense, and considering climatic conditions, the amount expended is enormous. The close housing for six months, and awful heat another six, and being kept in close touch and sound of city life, are all detrimental to full development.

Why not bring them there and let them grow in sight and sound of sugar and pineapple work. The Catholic clergy say give me your child until ten years old and I will defy you to eliminate Catholicism from it, and so it will prove to our and their benefit. Say one thousand ten-year youngsters are brought, in five years there will be many a pair of hands ready for work. In ten more our bringing in shiploads of the scum of the earth will have ceased, and we will have thousands of self-respecting American home makers.

Of course, I don't intend we should relieve the United States of its financial burden in any sense. My idea is to give land, on which they could build homes, to be under their entire charge. They to send nurses and children as they accumulate. In the temporary homes in the cities, and when one considers the difference in maintenance of the home there and here, traveling expenses will be a mere nothing.

The children are so beautifully trained and cared for, we would be such gainers, and as for the youngsters, what a thing for them—perpetual summer. No being taken, a few hundred at a time, to get a breath of fresh air, or a glimpse of a green world, to be in the midst of it always, how good. I do wish for their sakes it might be so, and I think if I were able to reach the ear of the powers that be, I should convince them quickly of the advisability of the change.

MR. JOHN PERRAULT

Mr. John Perrault, 335 Davidson Street, Boulevard St. Paul, near Montreal, Canada, writes: "I have been a bicyclist for over five years, and last spring I caught cold and did not take anything for it, for I thought it was not bad enough, but it came to catarrh. I was so discouraged that I didn't know what to do. I could not sleep; I always felt tired and troubled. Finally I began to take Peruna. After I had taken one bottle I felt better. I took another one, and now I am well. I would like to always feel as I do to-day. I often recommend Peruna to my friends."

Close Confinement. Mr. G. W. Woodbury, Rogers, Ohio, U. S. A., formerly Captain and Center of the Hiram College Basketball Team, writes: "There are times in the life of every student when excessive study and too close confinement and attention to the object in view will tell on your health. I have found that when body and mind alike are weary and refuse to work, a few doses of Peruna restores lost strength and invigorates one quicker and more permanently than anything I know. It gives one nerves of iron and muscles of steel, and assists the mental activities together with the physical, to a wonderful degree. The athlete knows the importance of being in fine form. Peruna is a valuable being in fine form. Peruna is a valuable aid to anyone who wishes to keep himself in vigorous health every day."
